Remarkable Vitality of the Aged Roman Pontiff Again Asserts Itself.

Cardinal Gibbons Leaves For Rome to Be in Time For the Election

at about noon, that although he did not yet dare to hope, he had perhaps caused to despair.

This promising outlook, however, was followed by the startling announcement that the pope had been attacked with diarrhoea, apparently caused by the large quantity of food he had taken, and that consulting physicians had been sent for.

The patient, when he began the day, showed only more his iron mountaineer fiber by tising and dressing almost without assistance, walking across the room to his arm chair and having his toilet fully prepared, even to the detait of being shaved. Throughout this procedure the none showed no signs of being exhausted. Indeed, he jokingly alluded to the amount of nourishment which was being imposed upon him and said:

"I ought to grow fat, as I have never had in my life as much as I get now." This buoyancy of spirit was considered to be one of the principal coefficients in the struggle with death which this admirable old man has made in the last seven days. The doctors, previous to the alarming attack of this afternoon, said there was not the slightest diminution in the acuteness of the pontiff's mental faculties as shown this morning in a remarkable manner, when the pope insisted on going over some of the large questions of chairs. state.

At about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, although no worse, the pope was not reported to be any better, and then came the news of the pontiff's sudden relapse and of the sending for a consulting physician.

That the pope fully realizes that his end cannot long be deferred is shown by the attention he has given during the last few days to the details of his final resting place. It is well known that he has discussed his wishes as to the place and manner of his functional state of the place and manner of his functional state.

Startly before he was taken ill dispositions and expressed his wishes as to the place and manner of his funeral. Shortly before he was taken ill the pontiff repeated to Cardinal Satolli his desire to be buried in the church of St. John Lateran. Rome, July 9.—Since his illness the pope had not begun a day as satisfactory as this. Indeed, hopes of his recovery reached such a point as to make the general public believe the pontiff might soon be out of danger. No better synthesis of this view could be given than in the words of Dr. Lapponi, uttered on leaving the sick room at about noon, that although he did not yet dare to hope, he had perhaps cased to despair.

This promising outlook, however,

what was probably the pontiff's last consistory.

Gratification was expressed by the prelates here on learning that Cardinal Gibbons sailed today for Rome. As the conclave will not take place until at least ten days after the demise of the pope, his eminence will arrive in ample time to participate. Outside of America. Cardinal Gibbons coming excites widespread interest, as he is regarded as the representative of the modern progressive spirit of the United States. It is recognized that one of the chief issues at the conclave will be between the advocates of modern progress and the supporters of con-

er Miowera, which arrived this morning, brought details of many shipping disasters which occurred off mondsville this afternoon as that of Ed the Australian coast and South Sea as a result of tremendous gales which raged during June. Brief facts have been cabled of the loss of the German bark Edith, with Captain Ertell and eleven men en route from Puget sound to Port Pirie, with lumber, and of the dismasting of the German bark C. H. Watjen, both of which vessels were long overdue. The Edith struck a reef off New Caledonia and her crew left in two boats, one with Captain Ertell and eleven men and the other with the mate, Mr. Kruger, and eight men. The captain's boat was not seen after they left the vessel. It was provisioned for fourteen days. The other boat was at sea for eight days and the shipwrecked men suffered great privations before they were rescued. After leaving the wreck the survivors made for the Solomon islands. Fierce contrary winds and heavy seas then arose, inflicting great sufferings on them. On the eighth day they sighted the C. H. Watjen, from New York to Yokohama, with a cargo of 100,000 cases of kerosene. The vessel had been caught in a furious cyclone, which rendered her almost a triple of the Mashington American league team. The body was mangled. One leg was torn off, presumably by the propeller of the Maid of the Mist, near whose landing the body was found. M. E. Green, a stockholder in the Washington.

When the train stopped at Bridgeburg Cole did not deliver Delehanty up to a constable, as the Canadian police say he should have done. He just not have the train vessel had been caught in a furious cyclone, which rendered her almost a cyclone, which rendered her almost a complete wreck, her masts, spars, rudder and other gear having been completely lost. Of her cargo no less than 20,000 cases of kerosene had been jettisoned in order to relieve her. For another seventy-six days the companions in suffering partly drifted and partly sailed with the assistance of jury masts, which they had rigged, finally finding themselves at Yale island, off the coast of New Guinea, whence the Edith's crew were taken to Australia, while the Watjen's people remained with their vessel, hoping to
